Our Vision & Mission

Vision

The International Council of Psychologists is committed to furthering world peace, to promoting human rights, and to developing friendship and collaboration among mental health professionals globally.

goal

ICP is committed to furthering world peace, promoting human rights and promoting collaboration among mental health professionals and social scientists, globally.

mission

- To advance the science and practice of psychology and to support the use of psychological knowledge to promote social health and justice;
- To contribute to world peace and human rights for all peoples by helping to empower under-represented ethnic and culturally diverse groups;
- To encourage world-wide wellness through promotion and integration of health and mental health services globally, and
- To foster international professional development, networking, communication, mentoring and friendship among psychologists and allied mental health

Our History

The International Council of Psychologists, Inc.(ICP) celebrates 71 years as a pioneering professional association in December 2012. ICP's three name changes reflect the inclusive, innovative, and collaborative nature envisioned by those who established the National Council of Women Psychologists in the USA in 1941. In 1946, the name was changed to International Council of Women psychologists and women psychologists from all nations were invited to share in furthering the advancement of scientific psychology and its applications throughout the world.

In 1959, when membership was opened to all psychologists, the name became The International Council of Psychologists. This expansion enabled ICP to broaden its mission, range of activities, and membership.

In 1962, ICP became incorporated in Connecticut as a 501C3 non -profit educational organization. ICP was granted Non-Governmental Consultative Status to The United Nations Economic and Social Council in 1981. ICP's Main UN Representative now sits on the Congo board.

ICP leaders appoint committees to address professional and liaisons to international and national professional organizations. These committees provide opportunities for members to collaborate with other associations on matters of professional interest.
